Monterey Symphony Enjoys Success

by John Upton

With the help of Ludwig van Beethoven, the Monterey County Symphony unleashed a concord of sweet sounds that nearly blew us out of our seats Tuesday night at Sunset auditorium. The Ninth Symphony may be one of the most monumental pieces of music ever written, and when an able conductor and 171 musicians and singers lay their hands on it, the result is impressive indeed.

The able conductor was, of course, John Gosling, and the singers were members of the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society and guest artists Marie Gibson (soprano), Claudine Carlson (mezzo), Edward Jameson (tenor), and James Tippey (bass).

Beethoven completed the work four years before his death, after nearly a decade of sketches for a musical setting for Schiller's "Ode to Joy." In its final form, the symphony was to become not a setting for vocalists but a gigantic orchestral entity, reinforced at its towering climax by a triumphant chorus.

The work is huge in all dimensions. Mr. Gosling judiciously trimmed it a little by omitting some of the repeats, but even so it ran about an hour and fifteen minutes. It boasts an almost oriental richness of texture, and an emotional range that embraces tenderness and defiance, spookiness and pomposity, majesty and despair, playfulness and joyous affirmation. To confound those who can only regard Beethoven as a "serious" composer, there is a marvelously facetious little village band, complete with piccolo and bass drum, in the last movement.

The sheer power evinced in this massive piece of composition cannot be conveyed to anyone who has never heard it performed. Mr. Gosling is to be commended for having the courage to undertake it without a cadre of full-time musicians, and for having the skill and wisdom to extract such performances from a group of dedicated amateurs. (Let it be noted that here we use the term "amateur" in its original sense: one who performs for love rather than for money.)

Many of us in Tuesday's audience were surprised to hear a Stravinsky work that had little in common with "The Firebird" or "Petroushka." The Russian composer, like most serious musicians, is an admirer of Johann Sebastian Bach; eleven years ago he completed an orchestral and choral setting for Bach's "Choral Variations" (originally written for organ), in the classical 17th-century style. As performed by Mr. Gosling and his cohort, it proved to be elegant and demanding, with a contrapuntal opulence worthy of the master himself. It was particularly challenging for woodwinds and brasses, who skipped about in fine style.

All in all, it was a rewarding concert. There were some awkward pauses between movements, which were probably unavoidable because of the limitations of the stage; there were some goofs here and there (always inevitable). But live music, played by living musicians, is so much more delightful than taped studio productions that we should bless the Monterey County Symphony Association for reminding us that musicians are not media, but human beings.

This concert (the last of the 1966-67 season) was recorded on tape by Radio KMBY-FM, and will be broadcast on Sunday, May 21, at 8:00 p.m.

Melvin Belli To Speak Here

Famed trial attorney, Melvin Belli, is scheduled to speak at 8:00 p.m. in the Carmel Sunset Auditorium Saturday evening, May 20th. Belli is to be the featured speaker in a special program on John F. Kennedy and the historical events of the assassination. Belli, defender of Jack Ruby, will speak following a showing of the film "1,000 Days"—The story of JFK's administration. The public is invited to attend the event which is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Young Democrats. Admission is $1.00 for adults and 50c for students.

SEA FEVER

(A memorial)

... I must down to the Seas again, for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied;
And all I ask is a windy day with the white clouds flying,
And the flung spray and blown spume, and the sea-gulls crying ...

JOHN MASEFIELD
(1878 - 1967)

John Masefield was born June 1, 1878, in Ledbury, Herefordshire, and died recently after a long successful life of poetry. His early adventures on the high seas influenced many of his works, such as "Sea Fever."

Cover photograph is by Forrest Cornwall of Carmel, son of Juney Lee Cornwall, retired business woman. Forrest is now attending MPC and has been studying photography for a year. He shot the photo with a Minolta at speed 125 at f8.

CIRCLE THEATRE

After a tragic car accident disabled C. Winter Van Horn, the leading man of the Circle Theatre's latest production, "The Waltz of the Torredors," now starring Robert Heater and Gertrude Chappeil (picture at left), regained its footing and is now thrilling audiences each weekend. "The Waltz of the Torredors" is a high comedy and very well enacted by an excellent cast. A perfect evening can be enjoyed by attending the community theatre's very fine production.

STUDIO THEATRE

Then at the Studio Theatre "Janus" is now in production with an equally competent cast starting Bob Lotz, Anita, Tom and Dick Veeland. "Janus" is a modern comedy which concerns an unwed man and woman, both with families, who each year meet to write historical novels. The plot thickens when the woman's husband enters unexpectedly.

WHITE OAKS THEATRE

The White Oaks Theatre in the Valley has announced that due to a valiant "save-the-theatre" drive, it will be able to have a 1967 summer musical season. Let's all support our local theatre arts and give White Oaks a boost in attendance.

Letter To Editor

Apparently the City of Carmel is considering the idea of making a parking lot out of the playground on the Northeast corner of the Sunset School property.

This playground is the "sandlot" of Carmel. Hundreds of our children have taken their first swings at a pitched ball on this stretch of dirt. The playground is centrally located and within reasonable walking distance from nearly all parts of the community.

Surely children have a right to play in their own town. The ball playing at Sunset is about the only visible activity left of a village life that once existed for Carmelites. Don't tell me that the parking problem has become so serious that this "sandlot" has to be sacrificed to that devouring monster, the Automobile. People who will walk many blocks from their cars to where they have to go in cities groan about parking in Carmel where they sometimes have to walk two blocks.

Sincerely yours,
Sam B. Coburn

With her glittering performance as Jessica, Anita Toon, in "Janus" takes her rightful place as one of the top comedienne barabours. Whether furnishing her collaborator Danny (Dick Veeland) with the spicy details to which she attributes the popularity of their historical novels or trying to convince her outraged husband Gil (Bob Lotz) that their marriage benefits from her superior traits with Danny, she provides constant amusement. Scenarist Ed Shilbert and our exciting new find, Emma Jane Hansen, sound out the published "Janus" script. Enjoy them Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights to June 18. Hospital Launches

Project '69

"Community Hospital must expand because its beds are full most of the time," Joseph B. Fratessa said in announcing Project '69, the goal of which is to complete the needed addition to the hospital by 1969.

While the present 100 bed hospital was completed only five years ago, Fratessa said it already is operating at maximum capacity because the Peninsula is growing at the rate of 3,500 persons per year.

Project '69, he said, is the second phase of a 25-year master plan the completion of which will see Community Hospital grow to a 300 bed nonprofit general hospital.

Volunteer Service Holds Luncheon

Mrs. Howard Healey presiding, the annual luncheon meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services took place on May 5 at the LaPlaya Hotel in Carmel.

At that time, the Garden Tour co-chairman, Mrs. Archer Allen, acting for the chairman, Mrs. S. Y. Cutler, presented Mrs. Paul Messier, president of the Volunteer Nurse Association, with a check for $3061.34, representing the proceeds of this year's Garden Tour. Mrs. Messier recalled that Mrs. Edward McMurtry and Mrs. Roy Page, both present at the luncheon, had assisted in the founding of the VNA 16 years ago. Since that time, MPVS has contributed $48,000 to the Visiting Nurse which amounts to 450 visits.

At the business meeting which preceded the luncheon, $1000 was voted to be given to the Monterey Institute of Speech and Hearing to help buy an audiometer. Also the Girl Scouts were voted $200 for camper scholarships.

Mrs. Healey announced that a memorial gift for the father of MPVS member Peg Bowen had been sent to the Cobalt Fund of the Community Hospital, The Lyseum of the Monterey Peninsula for Gifted Children came in for a gift of $3000 to be paid in three monthly installments.

A tentative extermination requirement by the Carmel Foundation was met by a gift of $4500.00. The Hospital Auxiliary will collect merchandise and help sell at the MPVS Thrift Shop in Seaside during the month of June and will receive all of the net profits of that period.

Stan & Edith Ewig Open Up Shop

THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1967 THE CARMEL PINE CONE 3

Stanley and Edith Ewig, long time residents of the Village, seem proud as they stand before their specially selected merchandise which is now on display in their new shop at the Del Dono Court.

Mr. Stan Ewig and his wife Edith love Carmel. His career in finance was leading to the fact that he would have to transfer out of town for promotion if he remained with a large corporation. Stan and Edith talked this over and came to the conclusion that they would join the shopkeepers of Carmel to see if they could insure continuing to live in this lovely area.

The result is that they have opened a "spanking" new gift shop in Carmel's newest building. They are specializing in the sale of crystal, silver, bone china and ceramics. The inventory in the shop reflects their excellent taste.

Mr. Ewig has spent most of his life in Carmel. He attended the Sunset and Carmel High Schools after which he spent two years in the navy. This was followed by studies at the New York Institute of Finance. Later he became the manager of Reynolds and Company's Carmel office until they closed their California operations. It was at Reynolds and Co. that Stan met Edith. She also worked there. Mrs. Edith Ewig has lived here since 1947 when her father Mr. David McIntosh came to Carmel to be in the construction business.

When the Security National Bank opened their Carmel Valley Branch Stan became the manager. That firm was purchased by United California Bank and it was at this point that Stan made his decision to go into his own business.

The Ewigs have two daughters, Valerie who is eight and Sharon who is six years old.

Carmel Girls Win Swim Meet

Two Carmel girls last weekend swam their way to a new title at the 1967 Pacific AAU Novice Synchronized Swimming Championships held at the San Jose Swim and Racquet Club.

Bonnie Banker and Judy Snyder, representing the Cypress Swim Club, defeated their nearest rival, the favored entry from the San Francisco Merionettes, by a most six points to win the gold medals and become the new Outdoor Duet Champions.

The Banker-Snyder duet, the Carmel club's only entry in the two-day meet which saw 102 entries from 11 Northern California clubs, added to their triumph as Miss Snyder took the second place ribbon, and Miss Banker third, in stent competition.

Judy, 15, is the daughter of Mrs. Winifred Snyder of Hatton Fields, and Bonnie, 13, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Banker of Carmel Knolls.

Judy attends Carmel High School. Both young athletes are honor students.

McCarthy will receive a $75 award.

Population Explosion

Five new boys were added to the population of Carmel during the first part of this month. The boys were all born at the community Hospital and arrived within three days of each other.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Slye started things off with Derek Vaughn who was born on May 7, and the next day Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips had a boy named Charles Henry. On May 9, Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Pinkerton had a son named Scott Darrell and Mr. and Mrs. John Stohltz added to the list with their new son named John Michael. Rounding things up for the week were Mr. and Mrs. Keith Linberg with their new son Eric Keith who was born on May 10.

Beauty is in the Eyes of the Beholder

by Dorothy Johnson

(Dorothy Johnson, the brilliant author of the last week's article, "Yet a Star is Shining," a profile on Ruth McElroy, is this week offering a sketch of James Peter Cost. Planned to be published every two weeks, other distinguished and well known residents of Carmel will be featured by Dorothy. She is a free-lance writer with residence in both Palo Alto and Carmel.)

As you step into the foyer of Hai Kuan (Sea Gate), the home of James Peter Cost, best known in Carmel for his seascapes, the point one notes immediately is his essential expression of beauty.

However one defines it, there is a realization that here is an artist whose paintings reveal all the cross-currents of life — his unique and private communication of feeling. "You might say," James Peter explained, "that my ideas reflect the taste of the common man, who perhaps doesn't paint — but who sees beauty in all things. A coke bottle. An old barn. A wooden kitchen match with a fat red tip. You know, — the traditional that so often fades away before we know it's gone."

Describing the sea as "eternal, ever moving, illusive; and difficult to the point of being almost impossible to paint," he said, "I always love the sea, its subtlety and power — but I like it best just before sunset when reflecting off the clouds, there comes to the water a soft greenish look like the color of old pewter."

Iron grey hair burshing against the back of his chair, feet propped on the sill of a plate glass door, James Peter was the picture of a man, completely relaxed, who fondled his Chihuahua, "Rascas," without paying any attention to what he was doing.

We were talking animatedly, when all of a sudden, he tossed the dog from his lap with a quick rhythmic motion, and opened the door to the sea. Beckoning for me to follow, he gave out a long whistle and began clapping his hands. In answer to his call, two sea gulls nesting on a rock off a little cove in the gully below us, lifted their wing and swooped straight to the deck. We fed them chunks of bread and scraps from the table. "These two are family pets," he smiled, "and we take care of them."

"The Companions"

"The Cow Barn"

In 1957, James Peter, with his wife Betty Jo, who runs their art gallery in El Prado de su Vecino, between 5th and 6th on Dolores, arrived in Carmel one fog-filled wintry night when the clocks were striking eleven. "I was doing some painting along the coast off the Cabrillo highway, and all the motels had out 'No Vacancy' signs," he said, "but we were lucky! Our landlady, Mrs. Prossiers, who was the owner of 'Nancy's Palette' at 6th near Dolores, made us welcome in her home." Mrs. Prossiers, typical of the community spirit here, told them something of our people and their unity of feeling. She talked about the trees and the fact that the pines and the oaks and the flowering shrubs came first. "Let the traffic and the pedestrians drive or walk around them," she said, "We Carmelites want to preserve the natural beauty that God has endowed us . . ."

"At that moment," James Peter declared, "I knew that I had found the place where we belong —" Many trips to Scottsdale, New Orleans, Laguna, Provence Town and other art colonies in the United States, convinced him that none could compare with Carmel. He believes that in the years to come, maybe twenty, thirty years down the road, that Carmel will be known throughout the world as "the school of art."

In this interview he told me that, "Carmel is already the nucleus of really great artists — many internationally known, and there are some who compare favorably with the old masters like Michael Angelo, Rembrandt, and Leonardo da Vinci." We agreed that there is a dim glimmer of light for the classic type of art in Carmel, and that the natural magnificence of our coast area should not be concealed or limited by any set form of artistic expression.

Often James Peter takes long hikes along the banks of Mal Paso Creek. "It is my favorite spot," he says, "something like the forest primeval. Here an old coal mine rears its head, and once I could not resist sketching the pillars of a dam left there by time." Mal Paso is a year round creek that runs along for seven miles or so, its lush growth almost-tropical in its abundance.

He does as much preliminary work as possible on the site, but rarely can he finish a painting in its exact location. "It takes too long," he said.

"When I start a painting," he continued, "let's say, for example, an old farmhouse — I become a carpenter, a hod-carrier, a brick mason — laying the foundations, the roof and the walls, brushstroke by brushstroke; mixing my paints to suit the theme until it's finished. Then, I close the gates on the fence and light the lamps from the ceiling."

"How does the aspiring painter begin?" I asked. "He must find time," he answered flatly. "Time is the most important single factor, excepting talent, to the beginner or any artist for that matter. He must overcome, for and by himself, the competition from TV, movies, radio, and all the complexities of our great society. A man's work is a combination of everything he is — an accumulation of his past experiences —" Spreading his arms in a gesture of conclusion, there was a small silence. He knew that the painter must look back and know himself, otherwise he cannot successfully project his philosophy on canvas.

His first painting, a copper pot and a ceramic vase done on a piece of cardboard box, never sold. He took his bachelor's degree at UCLA, and received his master's from the University of Southern California. "I sort of got into a mold," he explained. "I taught art in school for fourteen years — it took a long time for me to find myself and to recognize my own style."

James Peter employs no restrictions at all; is not influenced by any form or any person. "I've developed an appreciation for myself and for my own work," he smiled, "and I'm so doggoned happy about it." He defined his work as not being exactly "purist." "I paint what I want to paint — what I see, and the way I see it. Perhaps you could call me an as-is-ist!"

Viewers buy his pictures and like them just the way they are. Nobody ever says, "Please change the door knob, or I'd like a bit more light and shadow here or there." It is the one central fact of all James Peter Cost's paintings that they illumine in such a way that their significance is felt according to the thinking of each individual.

There are three children in the Cost family, a boy and two girls, Curtis, Janet, and thirteen year old Shelley, who has sold eighteen floral abstracts, mainly picked up by collectors.

One of their most valued possessions is a bronze bust of Wagner, done in 1906 by Joe Davidson, long recognized as the top sculptor in the United States. "The Metropolitan Museum wants it," said James Peter, "but this is one piece of art that I think we'll keep in the family." Long an admirer of the mystic Wagner, one of his most recent paintings, the ring series, is completely abstract; heavy and massive with strong, black strokes. He named it, "Sigfried's Funeral".

Truly one of the great painters of our time, James Peter Cost loves what he has to do and has had a remarkable success in this country. His devotion to his work and heightened joy of life sets an awe-inspiring example. His love of people knows no bounds. His awareness of all the conflicts and changes that go on in the world and within the community — and his willingness to take a stand reflects the well-springs of his philosophy.

Our parting words were intense. We were discussing the proposed widening of Highway 1. "We can hope. We can pray," he said. "Praying is one thing and getting your prayers answered is another, but the important thing is to know what the answer is."

James Peter Cost waved his arms in a gesture of denouement. "Let's all go out and fight with guns and rifles! 'If they must widen the freeway,' his voice grated out, "let them dig up the streets for their materials and we'll go back to dirt roads in Carmel. Let's keep out the litter-bugs and the neon lights — and all the things that are false—"

"Around the World" Slide Presentation

An "Around the World" slide presentation will be given by Larry McKinnis of Honolulu in Brey Hall at Carmel High School Saturday May 20 beginning at 7:00. The public is invited, free of charge.

The travelogue will include professional slides of countries seen on his tour: Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand, India, Lebanon, Jordan, Egypt, and Greece.

Mr. McKinnis is a nationally known photographer and instructor who has for 3 years conducted tours around the world guiding photographers to the most photographic spots in the world. He will conduct his fourth trip this October.

Under the leadership of this famous guide and photo instructor, up to 35 persons will accompany him on his 34 day tour of the Orient and Europe.

This year Bernice Huber, local artist and potter, plans to take a group from this area who are interested in sketching the same places which are being photographed. According to Bernice, "This is a special, thrilling tour planned for those who would like to combine travel with a loved hobby. I want to stress, this does not mean that you must be an artist to enjoy this trip." Bernice pointed out that the group will have the benefit of both photography and artist instruction on the trip.

Plan to attend the slide presentation at Brey Hall and see the world through the lens of a professional photographer. For further information call 624-7092.

PARTY PLANS . . .

by Phyllis Jervey

"Let Father Take Over For Mother"

A splendid example of male cuisine was demonstrated at the recent Adobe Luncheon at Memory Garden in Monterey. This super picnic was masterminded by George Leutzinger, president of Cannery Row Properties. It was he who gave Party Plans the recipe for the 2,000 chicken broiler halves which gave an absolutely superb flavor but easy-to-handle-at home specialty.

The idea of the al fresco luncheon was "Flower Gardens of the Pacific," tying in with the general theme of "Ports of Call." The marvelously handled menu (all by amateur chefs, dedicated to the Monterey History and Art Association) went like this:

Al Fresco Monterey Lunch
Superb Barbecued Chicken Halves
Old Monterey Beans with Flavor
Western Salad
Choice of Breads and Butter
Coffee Assorted Wines
Cake Squares

Superb Barbecued Chicken Halves
(Sauce for 30 chickens)
One gallon vegetable oil; 1 gallon Sauterne wine; 2 pkgs. onion soup mix; a good taste of oregano and thyme; Kikkoman Japanese sauce, also to taste; 1 large pkg. Accent; salt and pepper to taste. (Did the cooks-for-the-day lick their fingers!)

The waist-high barbecue brick pits were ready with oak-wood charcoal into which laurel leaves and eucalyptus twigs had been scattered. The large chicken broiler halves were dipped into the above aromatic sauce, then rushed to the searing job.

Monterey Beans with Flavor (Serves 24) These keep for later on 2 lbs. pink pinto beans; 10 garlic cloves; 8 large onions; 4 tbsps chili powder (or to taste); 4 green chili peppers, (canned), 1/2 cup olive oil; 1 lb. cut up Ranch style bacon; 2 large cans tomato sauce.

Cook beans without salt until just soft. Make sauce as follows: Mince onions and garlic, chop peppers and fry together in oil until almost tender. Never overcook. Add tomato sauce and chili powder with the inch-cubed thick bacon. Cook slowly, stirring quite often

An exotic and different accompaniment to barbecued chicken broilers is Potato Sambal, an unusual combination of coconut, chili powder and lemon juice.

(before adding beans) for several hours, at least three. Then add the beans with own liquor. They should be tender but not to the mashed stage. Let stand as long as 8 hours, then reheat gently and keep at the low simmering stage before serving. Taste for salt.

If for a change you would prefer something different, but suitable for our Western Coast, as an accompaniment to the broiled chicken halves, why not try

Exotic Potato Sambal
(serves 8 for home use)

2 tbsps. olive oil; 4 cups cubed boiled potatoes; 6 tbsps. finely chopped onion; 4 tbsps. flaked coconut; 2 tbsps. finely chopped green pepper; 1 1/2 tbsps. chili powder; 1 tsp. lemon juice; 1 tsp. seasoned salt (or to taste).

Mix all ingredients in skillet and heat on charcoal grill. Serve right from the pan as an ideal side dish for the chicken.

Western Salad
(Serves 12)

Two garlic cloves; 1/2 tsp. each, dry mustard and coarse black pepper; 1 tsp. seasoned salt; 1/2 cup tarragon wine vinegar; 1 cup vegetable and olive oil (half and half); 2 tbsps. chopped parsley and chives; 2 green onions, thinly sliced with tops; 1 lb. fresh young spinach; 1 head Western iceberg lettuce. Garnishes as desired.

Rub large wooden bowl with cut garlic cloves and remove same. Put dry ingredients into bottom of bowl. Stir in vinegar and oil; add parsley and chives. Beat with rotary beater to mix well. Add green onion, spinach, stems removed and leaves broken with one's fingers; add shredded lettuce. Toss lightly. Garnish with radish roses, artichoke hearts and pitted ripe olives. Have another bowl of herb-flavored croutons (packaged) for each to add their own at serving. For children there can be cake squares and cookies with bottled soft drinks. And pots of hot coffee to help ward off the chilling winds from the Pacific.

"THANK YOU!" . . .

Mrs. Marie C. Van Auken, of Photography Salon of Carmel, wrote.

"You said that the Pine Cone was the very best medium of advertising in this area, and now I am convinced.

"My small weekly ad more than paid its way.

"I only regret the dollars I spent elsewhere and you can be sure that I intend to put all my eggs in one basket from now on.
"Viva la Pine Cone!"

"The Low Road to Loch Lomond"

by Carey Edson Olson

Probably one of the most interesting trips I have ever made was a day trip to Loch Lomond in the spring of 1963. My husband and I were staying in a small village just outside Stirling and were eager to see some of the sights in this region of Scotland — Loch Lomond being high on our list. Since we were dependent upon public transportation and it was still too early in the year for the inevitable sightseeing tours, we decided to plot our own route using the local bus services. Our landlord had originally suggested we go first to Glasgow and then take a bus directly to Balloch, a small village at the southern end of the lake. This, however, seemed to be the long way around and, after having spent nearly half a day trying to leave Glasgow when we had first arrived in Scotland, we had no desire to revisit this city.

As we had our route plotted, the local bus appeared to take us within a couple of kilometers of Loch Lomond and, despite the fact that it was a rather misty day, we were confident that we would have no trouble walking the remaining distance to our destination. Little did we know at that time how incorrect our calculations would prove to be. After having traveled for nearly an hour, loading and unloading local passengers along the way, the bus stopped once again — this time in what appeared to be the middle of a rather desolate and uninhabited moor. It took us a couple of minutes before we understood that this was where we were supposed to get off. Having expected a village of some sort, we rather reluctantly and unwillingly left the warmth and comfort of the bus to proceed upon our quest for Loch Lomond.

What had begun as a misty day in Stirling, had turned into a cold, rainy and windy day out on the moors and within five minutes we felt and looked like a couple of drowned rats. After having struggled along in the mud and the rain for a few hundred yards, we decided the only thing to do was try hitchhiking, since there appeared to be no sign of habitation anywhere within our range of vision, nor were there any signposts to guide us. Happily enough, the first car to come our way stopped and the driver offered us a ride.

The driver was an elderly gentleman, impeccably dressed in his Harris tweeds, sporting a fine handlebar moustache and speaking with a Scots burr so pronounced we could barely understand him. After some difficulty in communication, he explained that our destination lay approximately fifteen kilometers further on and that he was only traveling a part of that distance. When our travel agreement had been reached and we had properly thanked him for picking us up, our Scotsman suddenly made the statement, "I've been killing you Americans." Needless to say, that gave his two American passengers a real jolt, but my husband had the presence of mind to ask him to repeat the statement. This time we were to discern that he had been "curling" with Americans during, and shortly following, the Second World War. Our sighs of relief must have been audible for we had to confess our misunderstanding and then all had a good laugh—even our crusty Scots friend.

Our next ride was with an equally interesting young man who was on the way to Drymen to sell his eggs. We had to creep in, around and between the numerous egg cartons to find a place to sit and then settled back for what we believed to be the remainder of our trip. Drymen had been our original destination and from all the maps we studied, it appeared to be right on the edge of Loch Lomond. This, however, was not true. Drymen was still about two kilometers from the lake and, according to our egg-selling friend, was on the "wrong side." After seeing our crestfallen faces, he must have taken pity on us, for he offered to drive us around to Balloch if we would be willing to wait until he had unloaded his eggs. This we were more than willing to do and we had to laugh at ourselves, since Balloch was the village we would have arrived in had we taken the suggested route through Glasgow.

Shortly thereafter, we had our first glimpse of Loch Lomond from Balloch. Admittedly, it wasn't very impressive since heavy mist obscured most of the lake, but we had been told that we could probably take a steamer tour, so our spirits were not unduly dampened. As luck would have it, however, it was on "off-day" for sightseeing trips since the tourist season had not officially yet begun, so we tried hiring a small power boat in hopes of seeing something of this most elusive loch. This too, was a dead end for the mist was so heavy that small boats were not allowed on the lake. Our one last hope lay in taking the local bus around the western shore and, since its schedule was not determined by either weather or tourists, this we were able to do.

As we boarded, the conductress explained this was a school bus and, when we had arrived at the end of the run, there would be a wait of approximately an hour until the "bairns" were released from school. This was agreeable to us since we would have some time to wander around and sightsee. As it turned out, our destination was a small summer hamlet which, at that time of year, was almost completely deserted with the exception of a combination tea shop/gift shop and, of course the school about a half mile down the road. Despite its deserted appearance, this hamlet was most picturesque with its stone cottages, slate roofs and its one cobbled street leading to the lake. By this time, the mist had finally lifted, revealing both the fabled Loch Lomond and the imposing Ben Lomond looming up across the water. This was what we had come to see and, to us, it was well worth the rather damp and devious journey.

Our return trip to Balloch began quietly enough until we stopped to pick up the school children. They boarded the bus amid much noise, laughter and outright hilarity. It was then we really began to appreciate our conductress. She looked and acted much like a land-loving version of "Tugboat Annie," but despite her gruff ways, had a heart of gold. On this particular day, the hilarity of the youngsters appeared to be greater than usual and we soon learned the reason. Our conductress asked where the "wee-un" were, and as a reply, got only increased laughter from the young people. "What did you do with the wee-uns?" she asked again. Well, it seemed that the older children had told the younger ones that the bus had already left and that they had better run to catch up with it. With this bit of information, the bus driver shifted into high gear and away we went. Sure enough, about three quarters of a mile down the road were half a dozen "wee-uns" of about four or five, running their chubby little legs off trying to catch a bus that had never come. We promptly came to a halt and "Annie" enfolded all the little ones into her ample arms, meanwhile soundly chastising the older children. She was really reminiscent of a ruffled mother hen and we couldn't help appreciating her obvious concern for the "we-uns." Eventually all the children were safely deposited at their respective doorsteps and we arrived, once again, in Balloch.

Now, we were faced with the problem of getting home. Obviously, it wouldn't be the way we had come! Thus, we ended up taking the bus to Glasgow after all and then transferring to one headed for Stirling. Considering that it had taken us nearly four hours to reach Loch Lomond via our poorly plotted route and only two for the return trip, it proved to us the fallacy of traveling "as the crow flies." However, you will never convince us that taking the approved route would have been any more interesting or memorable than the one we traveled that day.

The Complete Gardener

... a regular diet of information having to do with plants

Gardening is a wonderful hobby and it offers a real challenge... just like golf... or bowling. We can't just take things for granted. We must keep in practice and face each problem as it arises... then dispose of it. Just as the golfer tries to stay on the fairway, and out of the rough, the gardener must try to avoid trouble. This is the time of the year when you can take inventory of your landscape. Decide now which of your plants are worth keeping. If some are sickly, replace them. If they're too much trouble to maintain, get rid of them.

One of the biggest joys in home gardening is raising plants in containers. Growing things in pots and tubs will allow you one outstanding advantage: portability. You can move around with ease. This is the kind of gardening for those with problem soils. And for those with big patios. It is important to select a container to fit the plant. You may be surprised to learn that a container can be too large to fit the plant. Do as the nurseryman does. Graduate your plants from pot to pot as they grow. If you have a gallon-size shrub, put it in a 12 or 14-inch tub. A 5-gallon size should have an 18 or 20-inch tub.

In planting containers remember the drainage holes. To keep the planting mixture from escaping through the holes, or clogging them, it's wise to put a layer of stones or pieces of broken pots on the bottom. And always dampen your mixture before putting it into the container. Not mushy wet, just moist. For general planting use a medium with a composted fir bark base. It should be uniform so that wet spots and dry spots will be avoided. Surface will improve any basic bark, or a leaf mold and sand mixture, to facilitate an even distribution of air and moisture. Use one-third of this material and mix it thoroughly with the other ingredients.

For a tropical effect, one of the easiest specimens to grow is the loquat tree. It's a native of Japan, it's evergreen, and it's a member of the Rose family. That makes it a first cousin to the apple. Grafted stock, available at nurseries, will bear delicious fruit, even along the coast. Those of you who live in warmer areas should plant your loquat in a protected location where the sun is not too bright.

Gilbert Boyd

HIPOINT PROFILES

by Bee Roe

Lawyer, baker, candlestick maker? ... not quite, but call him — artist, actor, engineer, teacher, and you find seventy-year-old Gilbert Boyd answering the call. This friendly man, born on the Emerald Isle, is now living at Hacienda Carmel. Twenty-one years of his life was spent with the Revere Copper and Brass Co. in Chicago, the last half of those years he acted as works manager. But, before that, immediately after graduation from the Belfast Technical College, he joined the British Army during WWI and spent the next four years with the 36th Ulster Division on the Western Front.

Emma Boyd met this dashing young man just after the war ended in 1918 at the College of Speech in Belfast—later they were married. She was one of the permanent cast and a regular performer at the Belfast Shakespearean Society. Their life together has been a happy one—both have that certain Irish wit, which is spontaneous and charming. Together they have given many concerts—she with her impressive and many times humorous readings — and he, as a baritone soloist, provides a delightful change of pace to the recitals. Mr. Boyd did not start painting until he retired at the age of 60. At that time he studied art in both England and France. Before coming to Hacienda Carmel the Boyds lived in Palo Alto where he taught classes at the Palo Alto Art Club.

That is, if you want fruit. Loquats grow rapidly and make dense shade trees. They are highly ornamental and require no special care. No pest will bother them. The generic name is Eriobotrya, which means "wooly cluster."

Then in 1948, while they were still living in Palo Alto, the call went out for volunteers to teach sketching to the Camp Fire Girls—Gilbert Boyd was one who volunteered, and since then has been a practicing artist and teacher. He loves color and stresses the importance of this to his pupils.

Last month he had a one man show at Casa Fiesta, Hacienda Carmel; here he exhibited various pictures of still life, landscapes, abstracts, and impressionism, which showed his unusual ability for variation. He has had remarkable success with his paintings and has won numerous awards.

One picture, "Medieval Crusaders" recently won first award in a showing in Carmel. With his exuberance and zest for living I know he will always be a winner.

The Golden Text is from Lamentations: "The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."

Georgann Kilpatrick
Wed To
Lawrence Dudash

Georgann Kilpatrick of Pebble Beach and Lawrence Joseph Dudash of Redwood City were married in a noon ceremony at the Carmel Mission Basilica on May 13. The Reverend Frank Dunne officiated at the service.

Georgann was given in marriage by her uncle, James Lloyd Womble of Pebble Beach, and for her wedding she chose a peau de sole and Alencon re-embroidered lace gown that was styled in A line pattern. The floor length dress had a sabrina styled neckline with elbow length sleeves and a detachable chapel-length train with appliques of French lace. Georgann's headpiece was an open crown of peau de sole and re-embroidered lace, dotted with seed pearls and streamers flowing from the center holding an English silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids with white roses.

For her maid of honor, Georgann chose Miss Cathy Morphy of San Rafael and her bridesmaids were Karen Thiltgen of Monterey, Mrs. Darrell Owens, cousin of the bride, from Rancho Cordova and Mrs. Jimi Womble of Pebble Beach.

For his best man, Lawrence, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew William Dudash, Sr., of Linden, New Jersey, chose his brother, Andrew William Dudash, Jr., of Thousand Oaks. The ushers at the service were Francis Scilacci of Salinas, Jimi Womble, the bride's cousin, of Pebble Beach and Harvey Kilpatrick, the bride's brother, also of Pebble Beach.

After the service, a wedding reception was held at the home of James Lloyd Womble of Pebble Beach and the young couple then left for a honeymoon to Lake Tahoe after which they will make their new home in Redwood City.
